Justification

The international sport industry is widely recognised as one of the fastest growing industries world-wide, achieving significant financial growth, even during difficult financial times. Indeed, even in countries in which the overall economy has shown signs of slowing down in its development, due to ferocious market dynamics, the sport industry has managed to achieve an unaffected, steady and at times impressively fast financial growth. As a result, the global sport industry has attracted substantial wealth through private and state investors, who view it as a wealth enhancement and development opportunity. This in turn has further increased the existing wealth within the industry, as well as the wealth offered to the professional athletes, stressing the need and potential for appropriate and carefully planned wealth management in sport.

In this certificate, we offer a broad and thorough examination of wealth management in sport, by focusing on all areas of wealth planning, wealth preservation, and wealth enhancement in the industry. We also explore the wider soft power opportunities and risks associated with wealth management in sport, to offer a well-rounded view of this ever relevant and developing field.

Professionals working or aiming to work within professional sport clubs, athlete management agencies, investment organisations, and wealth management agencies, undertaking this certificate, can learn the skills and principles needed in order to help plan, manage, and enhance wealth within and through sport.
