

FUNDAMENTALS OF PLANNING AND ORGANIZATION OF SPORTING EVENTS II

Module 2: Transport operations and security

Transportation and mobility

Organizer of the event

Responsible for evaluating, reviewing, and approving the transportation concept and services.

Transportation

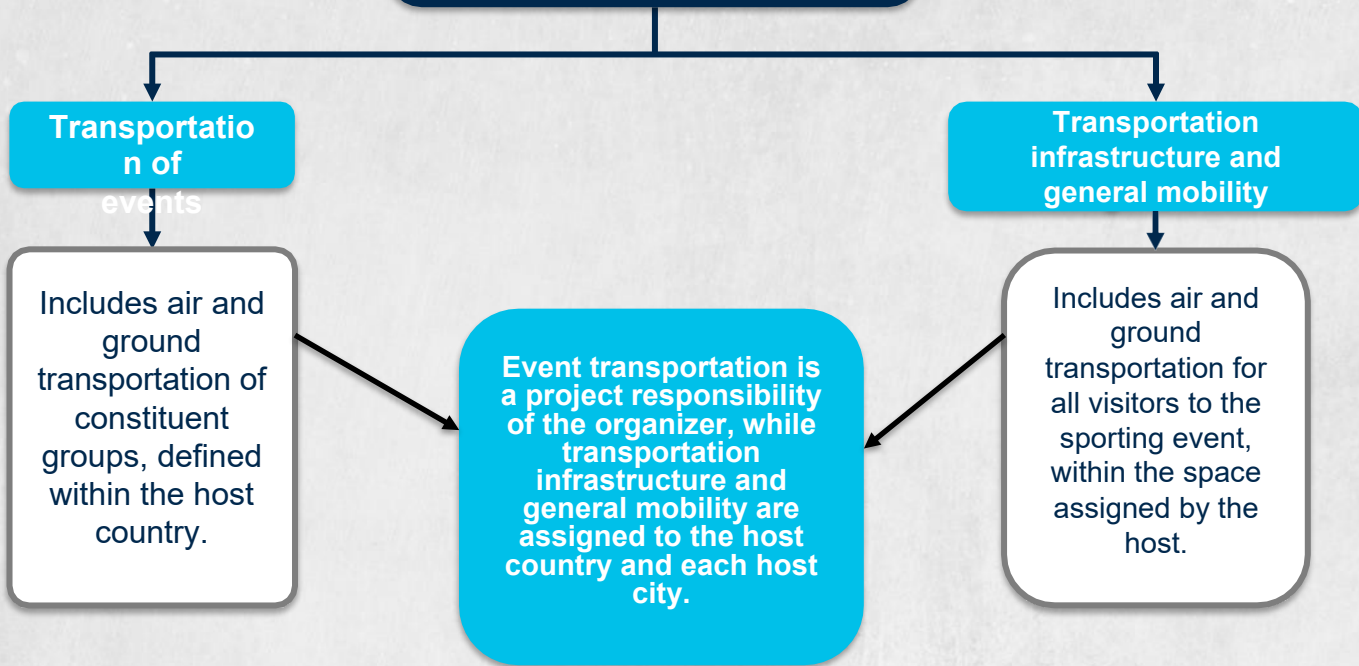

It is one of the most complex and critical projects to organize. This is so because:

The large number of parties involved in defining and delivering a transportation service for the event.

The large amount of resources required to implement the plan.

Large populations that use transportation, both directly and indirectly, during the tournament.

Transportation of large-scale events. Two projects

Integral document processing of transportation

Series of planning documents developed by the organizer

Mechanism for the Transportation Area to present plans for all aspects of transportation infrastructure integration and general mobility to the organizer.

Describes how the plan will be implemented and how transportation operations will be executed during the tournament.

Operational Plan

of Transportation

The success of transport operations depends on:

Understand the transportation requirements of all constituent groups throughout the event, to include initial arrival and final departure.

Define and replicate an operational model that can be replicated in all official venues, and throughout the tournament profile.

Assembling an adequate fleet of vehicles and a team of qualified and trained drivers.

Identify all transportation areas and ensure that appropriate transportation-related spaces are defined and operationally feasible.

Ensure that appropriate management and support services are identified, defined and implemented to enable the delivery of transport operations, consistently, during the event.
